MOVES APPEAL TO THE KING TO STOP MAKING PEERS.

Direct Blow at Liberal Scheme of Swamping Upper House to Pass Veto Bill Government in Bad Dilemma-The Lords Push Referendum Proposal

LONDON, March 28 - In the House of Lords this evening Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the second chamber, gave notice that he will submit on Thursday next a motion that an address be presented to the King "praying his Majesty, with a view to reform in the constitution of the present House of the house of Count Daquiros and the Lords, that his Majesty will be graciously pleased to consent to a bill being intro-duced limiting the prerogative and powers of the Camorra, for the return of the of the Crown in so far as they relate to the creation of peerages and to the issue of writs of summons to lords spiritual and temporal to attend, sit and vote in the House of Lords "

Lord Balfour of Burleigh moved in the House of Lords to-night the second reading of his bill to establish the referendum. The bill proposes that there shall be a reference to the people first in the event of the House of Lords rejecting a bill and second when a bill has passed both houses but 200 members of the House of Commons petition for a poll

Lord Balfour said the object of the bill was that the will of the people should prevail in all matters of legislation

Lord Morley, who is acting as Government leader of the House of Lords during the illness of the Earl of Crewe, opposed the second reading of the bill. He said the measure if it became a law would establish a revolutionary principle over Lords to force an appeal to the people whenever they chose.

Lord Lansdowne said that although the bill went further than he was prepared to go he thought the introduction of the referendum into Great Britain's political machinery had become indis-pensable. The referendum, he declared. rould restore the proper balance to the constitution and prevent the Lords from becoming a mere appendage to the House of Commons. The bill, he thought, should be regarded as an exceptional measure for the purpose of ending the differences of opinion of the two houses on important

Lord Lansdowne's notice, while largely a party move intended to delay the progress of the veto bill, is exactly in accordance with parliamentary precedents. The Unionist bill to reform the House of Lords, which has not yet been introduced. affects the royal prerogative, and parliamentary usage prescribes the necessity for asking the sovereign's leave to submit such a measure. It is usual to receive an affirmative reply, as the Crown places its interest in the matter at the disposal of Parliament.

The supporters of the Government are say that his action to-day challenges the whole Government policy. They are alarmed at the possibility of curtailing the prerogative, but the alarm is somewhat premature, as the King must take the advice of his Ministers in framing his reply and so the Cabinet presumably would have the matter in its own hands.

Opinions are completely divergent as to possibly counsel the King to refuse, as they would thereby incur the charge of wrecking the constitution in their own interests. On the other hand it is urged that they cannot stultify their own position by consulting the sovereign and thus resign the prerogative on which they rely in the last resort to carry out their own

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. VITERBO, March 28.-Gennaro Abbatemaggio, the chief informer, was again laced on the stand for cross-examination by the president of the court upon the resumption to-day of the trial of the thirty amorrists for the murder of Gennaro

Abbatemaggio continued his revelaion of burglaries which he had committed n cooperation with Luigi Arena, one of the prisoners who, while in Jail for another crime, accused Cuoccolo of having betrayed him to the police and demanded that the Camorra should order his removal. Abbatemaggio detailed the robbery of negotiations conducted by Enrico Alfano,

He also told the story of the burglary of the home of Baron Consiglio and his arrest and conviction for this crime. The informer explained how Gennard Cuoccolo, then the leader in such affairs, planned these burglaries.

Continuing his testimony, Abbatemaggio said that after his arrest for the burglary of the house of Count Daquiros he suborned the witnesses and in that way escaped punishment.

With great circumstantiality he recounted the story of the plot to murder Gennaro Cuocolo. A meeting of the Camorra tribunal was held at Bagnoli and the death of Cuocolo was decreed Thereafter preparations were made to waylay the intended victim and it was also planned to kill his wife. Some of the Camorrists opposed the murder, but the trust company, acting by its directors, in order to enable it to replace an objectionable loan by an adequately secured one. The trust company itself was payee. In March 1910, the trust company's officers told Dyer that the $600,000 note had been reduced and that there was $396,000 due on it. They asked him to make new notes for that amount and stock. Dyer without hesitation made the new notes. After the crash came we as a matter of fact the original $600,000 insured must turn over to the insuring company the conduct of his defence in case of litigation. He said that these cases were only an example of many instances where corporations were not only practising law but were practising in a manner which would be sufficient to disbar an individual so practising.

John Brooks Leavitt in submitting the report of the committee on discipline first broached the subject. He cited title companies as the most flagrant offenders. He said that one of them had even gone so far as to advertise to the public that it was engaged in the business of drawing wills. He said that it was useless to try many manner except upon the formal street.

In money.

The police found a will which had been note was paid on January 27, 1910, and that the Platt Iron Works stock had apparently been turned over to Mr. Carnegie without Dyer's [knowledge or consent and that in March when he was told that part of the old loan was outstanding and that the Platt stock was still pledged to it, such was not the case that the owes the trust company nothing, but if there is any liability with respect to the notes upon which he is sued the Platt Iron Works stock is ample to meet this liability.

Mrs. Freitaz evidently distributed her made in February. It named as the sole that the Platt Iron Works stock is a matter of fact the original $600,000 note was paid on January 27, 1910, and that the Platt Iron Works stock had apparently been turned over to Mr. Carnegie without Dyer's [knowledge or consent and that in March when he was told that the Platt Iron was a matter of fact the original $600,000 note that the Platt Iron Works as a matter of fact the original $600,000 note that the Platt Iron was paparently been turned over to Mr. Carnegie without Dyer's [knowledge or consent and that in March when he was told that the Platt Iron was paparently been turned over to Mr. Carnegie without Dyer's [knowledge or consent and that the Platt Iron was a matter of fact the original $600,000 not that the Platt Iron was paparently be used in any manner except upon the security of that stock.

The Hall and Its Character

FOR the furnishing of the modern Hall England of the XVII Century has given us models that can scarce be bettered either from the utilitarian or the æsthetic point of view.

A degree of dignity and character is here required which finds its full expression in the Oak and Walnut of Tudor and Stuart times.

Our Reproductions of the Furniture of these periods afford opportunity for the selection of the Gate-legged Table, the High-backed Chair or the roomy Settee which may add to the Hall a fitting touch of stately serenity.
